sends a hit squad after the cop and his men. Kit goes into hiding and finds that his superior officer has been watching over him while the cop is away. Kit is left without backup and his old friend Danny and some local cops force their way into a shootout with the hit squad. Cast Val Kilmer as Danny Lee, an undercover cop assigned to infiltrate a crime syndicate Kelly Preston as Sharon Gates, Danny's wife Tony Lo Bianco as Kit Chan, an undercover cop Rick Gomez as Angel, Kit's partner and Danny's friend Brad Dourif as Allen, the gang boss Michael Clarke Duncan as "Crazy" Eddie Tom Waits as himself Joe Esposito as Chief Alfonso David as Chacho, the hit man Fernando Meirelles as Homero Marta Santos as Ramona Linda Morante as Carlotta Gary Busey as the gang leader William Sanderson as Danny's superior officer Production Development This was the first and only film to be directed by Elyes Gabel, who had previously been a cameraman and an assistant director for director Joel Schumacher. Gabel had been a cameraman on Fight Club (1999) and an assistant director on The Number 23 (2008). He had also worked on The Usual Suspects (1995) and The Doors (1991) and the European release of Basic Instinct (1992). The film was the first in a five-picture deal between Focus Features and production company Dijon Films. Part of the agreement was that Dijon Films would work with Focus Features on as many films as they were able to raise finance for. Casting Val Kilmer had impressed Leonardo DiCaprio in Blood & Wine (1996), The Devil's Own (1997) and The Usual Suspects (1995). His role in Fight Club (1999) had also helped establish him as a leading actor in Hollywood. He had a relationship with Kelly Preston after they met in Blue Steel (1990) and their second collaboration was Con Air (1997). She had previously starred in The Divine Secrets of the Ya-Ya Sisterhood (2002) and Jackie Brown (1997) and was known for her beauty and fashion sense. Tom Waits was the first actor signed to play himself in the film. He had impressed
