How to fix an error where a base class could not be found?

So I have an interface for generating data, and a abstract class that implements the interface. I have a number of classes that implement the abstract class. However I get an error when I try to use the code that is in the base class. The interface: namespace Library.BaseClasses { public interface IMDataBase { public void GetData(int page, int quantity); } } The abstract class: namespace Library.BaseClasses

{ public abstract class DataBase
: IMDataBase { public abstract List GetData(int page, int quantity); } }

The actual class that I need to use this code:

namespace Library.Data {
public class TestData : DataBase
{ public override List
GetData(int page, int quantity) {
//TODO get data and return } }

I get an error when I try to use "TestData", saying that "The type System.Collections.Generic.List'1[Library 2d92ce491b
