With iOS 7's release yesterday, apps are finally coming to the table that you thought you'd never see on your Apple device. They'll help you share photos, check out new apps, and more, and you'll get to try out lots of them. If you've missed out on the best of the bunch, you're in luck: It's not too late to join the party. To make the most of it, we have recommendations on which apps should be at the top of your must-have list. Advertisement - Continue Reading Below Sharing Ever since it was in the original iPhone, Apple has made it easier to share a photo. iOS 7 will now have full-screen modes for both standard and split-screen photos. This will give you the best viewing angle for your photos, whether you're sharing them on Twitter or Facebook. You can also do something new, thanks to a new feature called "Photos" that makes sharing of your photos really easy and simple. The new Photos feature does more than just make sharing photos easier. For those who have been worried about how much information and privacy will be exposed through this new feature, rest easy: Photos will be as secure as before, but when shared, you'll have the option to choose where your photos go. If you opt to share a photo to Flickr, Facebook, or other social networks, you'll have to let them access your photos. If you don't want them to have access, you can opt out of sharing to them at any time. There are a ton of great sharing apps available right now, but we'd recommend something called "Collage," as it's the perfect fit for the photo-friendly app. Once you have all the images you need in your collection, just click the + sign at the top of the app and you'll be taken to a window to choose which images you'd like to share. You can either share the same photo or separate photos in the app. The good news is you can't accidentally send a photo with a friend or work colleague in it to someone you don't want to. The bad news is it's a total pain to figure out which photos you should be sharing. To use Collage, just get the app on your iOS device and start sharing. Evern 2d92ce491b
