Zika Update: Prevention Steps The Zika virus has spread to nearly 60 countries throughout the Americas. The mosquito-borne virus is spreading faster than it can be fought, and it is only a matter of time before it makes its way to North America. Here is a rundown of the steps that you can take to reduce your risk of contracting the virus: This next step is only necessary for people who live or work in an area that has confirmed Zika cases. If you or a family member has traveled to an area with Zika, then you need to get yourself vaccinated. That way, you won't be as susceptible to the virus if you are exposed. Of course, everyone should be vaccinated against the three leading tropical diseases—yellow fever, hepatitis A and typhoid—to reduce their risk of contracting any serious illness if exposed to an infected person. The most effective way to protect yourself is to delay your travel plans to an area that is currently affected by the ba244e880a
