Five United States Senators and 42 House members are urging US President Barack Obama to withdraw US troops from Afghanistan. According to a joint report by the five senators and 42 representatives published on the website of the New America Foundation, Obama should end the US engagement in Afghanistan "to focus on pressing issues at home". There are 11 years of the US troop presence in Afghanistan. Though the US started a withdrawal of troops from there in June, President Obama has not withdrawn the US troops completely. Washington is not even planning to withdraw the troops from Afghanistan by December 2014. Now the Congress is not very supportive of it. The decision to withdraw the troops in Afghanistan was also opposed by the government. Obama had also delayed the decision on whether to withdraw the troops in Afghanistan until after the presidential election. I feel it is better if he makes this choice during the term of office. I do not think he can withdraw troops from Afghanistan in the first term and then go for the second term when things will turn out better than before. The report says that now it is very clear to the world about the failures of US in Afghanistan. The report says it is not logical that US is spending hundreds of billions of dollars there but the
