Category:Indian companies established in 1998 Category:Film production companies of IndiaQ: What determines the divisibility of a sequence by a polynomial? Suppose that  $f(x)$  is a polynomial with integer coefficients, and that  $f(x)$  is not the zero polynomial. I know that  $f(x)$  can be written as  $f(x) = x^k h(x)$  for  $k \geq 0$  where  $h(x)$  is an integer-coefficient polynomial. If  $f(x)$  is divisible by  $x^m$  then  $f(x)$  must be divisible by  $x^{m+k}$  and  $x^{m+k-1}$  for all non-negative integers  $k$ . My question is, what is the criterion for this divisibility to hold? My understanding is that  $f(x)$  must be divisible by  $x^m$  if  $m \leq k$  and  $k \leq n-1$ , but what about for larger values of  $m$  and  $k$ ? I imagine that  $x^m$  must be a factor of  $f(x)$  when  $m > k$ , but what about when  $m \leq k$ ? A: If  $f(x)$  is divisible by  $x^m$  then  $f(x)$  must be divisible by  $x^{m+1}$  for all non-negative integers  $k$ . Torsional vibration dampers are well known in the prior art and typically comprise a flywheel attached to the engine, and an annular damper
