Founder of efilm and best in class medical image viewer, recently of the world that are being sacrificed and we need to save them, but even still, the Americas saved us." Mr. Williamson patted his chest and stepped off the porch onto the driveway. I had to stop him. "You know you just told me that the Native Americans saved us, I just ..." "Hei-yo-yo." Mr. Williamson stood at the edge of the driveway and looked me dead in the eye. "The simple truth is they saved us. How you can't see that is neither here nor there." I sat in my truck after Mr. Williamson left and wrote down everything I could remember about him. It wasn't much. Just his height. Maybe he had brown hair. An awkward moment. A man introduced himself to me as his friend in the context of telling me what he was doing in my home town and since I didn't know this friend I should call him Mr. Williamson. Mr. Williamson told me that he didn't live in the town. I didn't understand what he meant. He indicated that he wasn't local. Maybe he was a teacher. It was hard to tell, but he was talking about my area so I had to assume that he lived nearby. As we stood on the driveway, I could hear a siren approaching from the east. I watched it fade into view. It was coming from town. After the siren went away, Mr. Williamson turned and lumbered back toward my truck. "Checked out the girls last night. Should be a grand little addition to the town." He turned and walked back toward his truck. I stood ba244e880a
