User Interface: 11.1v2 - Foundry Nuke Studio v11.1.0 v2_6_1. The workflow has been changed. For a full list of changes, view the Release Notes. Résumé: Nuke is both a foundation for and a node in the Foundry Nuke FX Compositing and VFX workflow. Nuke is the mainstay of many Creative Cloud (CC) produced films, TV shows, and games. As a powerful, flexible, cross-platform tool, Nuke provides a complete, easy-to-use compositing, animation, and rendering environment. Here are the most popular options for your version of Nuke: Nuke 11.0 • Ability to import still photos as source frames or use the Animation, Motion Tracking, Tracking, and Keying tools to track and track/key in moving photos. • Ability to import, resize, and track/key frames from multiple still photos at once, or using the size and alignment tools. • Ability to import and work with still photos as camera positions or as virtual camera positions for tracking purposes. • Ability to attach light sources to the camera track for cloth simulation. • Ability to attach and use camera volumetric effects. • Ability to animate and morph transparent motion graphics elements into camera positions or camera pans, zooms, and dollies using the Morph tool. • Ability to move elements from one Nuke scene to another with the Import Tool. • Ability to render out a complete frame for use as a source image. • Ability to render out two frames and use them as animation layers. • Ability to render out a frame and import it into another Nuke scene for use as a multi-layer image. • Ability to render out all layers and automatically export for use in After Effects as an AE comp. • Ability to render out a full out-of-camera comp (composite, matte, and keying) that can be used as a track matte. • Ability to render out a composited comp in a TV compositing friendly format and view it in After Effects. • Ability to do stereo 3D work. • Ability to do multi-camera stereo 3D work with ability to do horizontal and vertical camera rigs, auto correct for the vertical offset and/or rotation and ability to change the offset and rotation manually. • Ability to extend the Nuke Interface to the 3D tracker. • Ability to play with all possible trackers of the 3D tracker
