Liz and John Soars. Amanda. I absolutely love the direction you have it. It made the subject alive for me. I need more instruction on how to write. But, I love how you did it. I was quite confused at the beginning of this assignment.. Read More » the evolution of the sampled species after the punctuated equilibrium models were specified: STR, STI, LDH, and AWLDH. In the STR models, all five sampled species are assumed to be evolving under the same selective regime; in the STI model, the three sampled species are assumed to be evolving under three different selective regimes; in the LDH model, the evolution of all five sampled species is assumed to be under the same selective regime, but the divergence time for each of these species is assumed to be drawn from the same gamma distribution; in the AWLDH model, the evolution of all five sampled species is assumed to be under the same selective regime and all divergence times are drawn from the same gamma distribution. All models were run with five MCMC chains and the convergence was assessed using the condition number and autocorrelation time. After convergence was reached, the first 10 % of the output was discarded as burn-in, and the posterior probability distributions were estimated using the MCMC samples after the burn-in phase. To evaluate the support of the different models using different datasets, we performed three tests.
