Cystosarcoma phyllodes is a rare benign fibroepithelial tumor, characterized by the presence of multiple cystic spaces lined by columnar cells, sometimes with mild atypia. Despite its benign nature, local recurrence can occur, resulting in low rates of cure. This case report describes the development of a cystosarcoma phyllodes of the breast from a benign cyst. Cystosarcoma phyllodes was confirmed by histopathology. Surgical excision with axillary lymph node dissection is the recommended treatment. We report a case of cystosarcoma phyllodes that developed from a pre-existing fibroadenoma of the breast.
