About It had been a relatively smooth transition from college football to the NFL. So when the Minnesota Vikings selected defensive end Everson Griffen with the second overall pick of the 2011 NFL Draft, most people expected him to make a big, immediate impact. Obviously, that didn't happen. Griffen put together just three games of good, steady production in his rookie season. However, he's been improving every year and he has the physical tools to be a dominant pass-rusher. Griffen's technique is actually fairly simple, although mastering it will take time and hard work. He is a fairly stout defensive end that uses his strength and quickness to dominate against the run and set the edge against the pass. It's just that Griffen needs to learn how to use them most effectively. That's what the Vikings have in mind when they're drafting him. His quick feet and powerful lower body will allow him to get to the quarterback. He just needs to learn how to use all that strength and athleticism effectively.[Bursitis of the gluteus medius muscle and the articulation with the ischium bone]. Bursitis of the gluteus medius muscle is usually connected with musculoskeletal problems at the hip. It can be seen in purely mechanical pathological processes, such as Osgood-Schlatter disease or Haglund's syndrome or in cases of rheumatic diseases. For many years the first condition was thought to be the leading cause. If this diagnosis is made early, however, treatment is fast, effective and most simple. If the diagnosis is delayed, the treatment is more difficult and sometimes ineffective. The patients with pain in the hip region usually suffer from overuse of the hip joint. They have to stand or walk for a long time and most of them have a hard and uncomfortable life style. It is the goal of this report to give some instructions to doctors on how to recognise and treat this rheumatic disease. We will go through the clinical signs and the laboratory and radiographic findings. Then, we will point out the classical treatment modalities for this disease.

Resolution of diffuse leptomenigeal enhancement by gamma knife radiosurgery. A case report of diffuse leptomenigeal enhancement is presented. Magnetic resonance imaging demonstrated a shunt in the leptomeninges at the cervicomedullary junction. The lesion was removed surgically and the histology and immunohistochemistry were compatible with glioneuronal tumor. The patient underwent Gamma Knife radiosurgery which led to complete disappearance of the enhancement of the leptomeninges. If this reported case is considered together with three others described in the literature, it seems that treatment with radiosurgery may be effective for the resolution of diffuse leptomenigeal enhancement.
